

Waleed Katoor

Executive Longevity · Digital Growth Strategy

ما بتشتريها. بتكسبها.

You cannot buy your health. You will earn it." — Waleed Katoor"

One connected system that turns attention into booked calls, calls into clients, and clients into proof.

The plan on one page

Waleed went from roughly 125 kg to athletic at 44 while running a director-level job and raising three daughters. He isn't selling fitness. He is proof that a busy man can recover his health.

Today that story doesn't turn into business: 1,209 posts, 1,232 followers, no website, no booking path, no client system. But the account is moving: the last 30 days ran at 1,023 median views against 827 before. This is a build, not a rescue.

Social Media

Creates demand: 4 Reels a week + a Saturday carousel, Arabic-first, him on camera

Website

Converts: one page, eight sections, a calendar wired into automation

CRM

Runs the coaching: dashboard, client profiles, progress, payments, voice notes

AI Automation

Removes the admin: nine client automations + a leads engine

Five decisions that shape everything

1	Proof, not coach He shares what worked on him and sends people to specialists for the details.
2	He speaks Reels where he talks earn nearly twice the views (1,622 vs 822) and 3× the likes.
3	Arabic first His growth audience thinks in Arabic. Captions burned into every video.
4	Client enters the data Forms and WhatsApp do the typing — not Waleed.
5	Channels before automation WhatsApp, Instagram and Facebook are set up properly first.

What the data says to do

Content Pillars

Key Tactical Decisions

Post at 20:00 KSA

19:00–21:00 performs best. After midnight is the worst slot (334 median views).

60–120s length

Best engagement at 3.8%. Teaching Reels run 45–90s, nothing under 10s.

Friday & Tuesday anchor

Friday (1,163) and Tuesday (1,082) are anchors; Sunday (579) tested for 4 weeks.

5 targeted hashtags

Used on only 2 of 85 Reels. Five targeted tags per post from now on.

Brand foundation: executive longevity

Where he is now

A fitness creator competing with 25-year-old coaches on looks and volume.

Where he goes

Executive longevity. Health as the asset that protects the career, the marriage and the years ahead.

The enemy

The belief that success costs you your body, and that this is a fair, temporary price.

His role

Proof, not coach. "I am not a specialist. Go to a specialist for the details."

Positioning

For the Arab professional man past forty who has built everything except his health, Waleed Katoor is the proof that it is recoverable: a business director who went from 125 kg to athletic at 44 and explains exactly how, in the language his audience thinks in.

The brand line, in his words

ما فيك تشتري صحتك. رح تكسبها. ولما تكسبها، بتصير ملك الدنيا.

Who we talk to

PRIMARY AUDIENCE

"The 2AM email man"

- Men 38–55 in Riyadh, Jeddah, Dubai, Doha
- Director level or business owner, 90–130 kg
- Has started and quit three or more times
- Has money but no time, and stopped believing any plan fits his schedule
- Two to four children; a recent photo made him uncomfortable
- Consumes in Arabic

❏ Aim at one man: 42, 110 kg, works too much, two kids, tried three times and quit.

SECONDARY AUDIENCE

Their wives

Family content has a 1,913 median against 859 overall. Women share health content about their husbands.

EXPLICITLY NOT

Young men chasing aesthetics, competitive lifters, anyone who wants a fast transformation.

Voice and visual identity
